You can find lots of really funny and silly movies that people are sharing on Coub. It can be a good source of movie ideas for your audience. For example, if your company is in the B2B segment of the online fashion industry, you can promote your company to finance managers, managers in charge of supply chain, fashion designers, and fashion buyers. They are the people who are in direct contact with your business's target audience. B2B marketers use a combination of methods to promote their products and services to the right people. Great article as per usual. My only issue is the link at the bottom to the affiliate program. If you read the article it is implied that you have to promote the master review to get the commission. That is not the case. I only made $300 in my first month. My issue is I have been trying to get started with all of this for a while. I had a blogspot and was trying to create content. Didn't work so I deleted the blog and created this one with a domain name I bought from one of the sites you recommended. I followed the 5 day free trial on the Wealthy Affiliate membership and watched the training there. I didn't do much from there. I have a "free membership" of WA and signed up for the $5/mth option so I can promote my site. I am wondering what else I can do to promote my site. The only thing I can see that I could promote is another website that I have built as well. That website is focused on providing training and coaching for Wealthy Affiliate. Maybe one day I will get there but for right now what do I promote? Website traffic is a measure of how many people visit a website. All websites, be it an e-commerce website or a simple blog, need traffic to gain revenue. Your website traffic can be measured by either a return on an advertisement campaign or some other means. Advertising campaigns are typically based on Pay Per Click (PPC) and Pay Per Impression (PPM) approaches. Social media marketing, on the other hand, is based on impressions, shares and clicks.
